Join us for an online community forum to learn about how the NDIA is testing the new way of planning.

The Australian Government is improving the NDIS to make planning easier and fairer for participants.

These changes follow feedback from the disability community and the NDIS Review.

Testing helps the NDIA to understand if the new way of planning works well for participants before it is rolled out in April 2027.

A panel of NDIA representatives will talk about:

- what testing is and why we're doing it
- how we make sure taking part will not affect people's current or future plans
- the different testing activities available
- who can take part
- what participation involves
- how feedback will be used.

A live Q&A session will follow the panel discussion.
