20 August 2019

Earlier this year the Minister for the NDIS, Stuart Robert, announced several short term measures to resolve some delays for children under seven years of age in accessing Early Childhood Early Intervention (ECEI) supports.

From Monday 12 August, NDIA staff began calling families and carers of children who have been waiting for 50 days or longer since receiving an access decision to discuss the option of a six month plan.

Calls will start in South Australia and subsequently be rolled out in other parts of the country to reduce wait times as soon as possible.

See the frequently asked questions for further information.

Related articles

Information for parents on the Early Childhood Early Intervention Approach

Date
30 October 2019

$25 million for NDIA Early Childhood Services in Western Australia

Date
9 January 2019

Delivering the NDIS plan: new data demonstrates significant drop in NDIS wait times for families

Date
12 February 2020

Read more news