As part of the National Disability Insurance Agency's response to the coronavirus pandemic, NDIS participants and providers can now connect with matching platforms through the NDIS website – to quickly and easily find the support workers they need.

We know that NDIS participants and their families; and NDIS providers may be looking for workers to deliver much needed disability supports, and provide extra cover in these times.

For participants, there are a number of matching platforms that can help you quickly and easily connect to support workers.

This can be especially useful if the delivery of your supports has been disrupted, you are looking for new support workers or backup coverage.

NDIS providers may also be looking for workers to deliver much-needed disability supports, and provide extra cover.

Services the platforms offer include posting job alerts, searching for workers, booking workers and assisting with on-boarding new staff.

These matching platforms are also looking for new staff to deliver a range of disability-related supports across the country.
