South Australians aged 18 to 64 years living in the Adelaide Hills, Western Adelaide and Eastern Adelaide regions and Victorians living in the Bayside Peninsula joined more than 140,000 Australians already participating in the National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS) on 1 April 2018.

Assistant Minister for Disability Services, Jane Prentice said the roll out of the NDIS in these areas was an important milestone for people with disability, their families, carers and the broader local community.
