Disability-related health supports operational guidelines

The NDIA is committed to helping participants understand how we make our decisions.

That's why we have released six operational guidelines for the following disability related health supports (DRHS):

- continence
- diabetic management
- dysphagia
- epilepsy
- podiatry and foot care
- wound and pressure care .

You can access these and other guidelines in an easy to understand format, on the our guidelines page .

Have the guidelines changed?

No. Content has simply been refreshed based on what's in our current DRHS guideline .

What do the guidelines include?

The refreshed guidelines explain what kinds of supports are available to you under the NDIS, and how we make decisions about funding relevant supports.

Our planners, delegates and Partners in the Community use these guidelines to help you understand what supports you may be able to access, and to ensure we are consistently making decisions aligned to this information.

We want to hear from you

We want to keep improving our guidelines.
