

23 September 2020

The National Mental Health Sector Reference Group met on Wednesday September 16, 2020 by video conference.

This is the third meeting of this Reference Group for the year. Gerry Naughtin (Chair) welcomed Dr Elizabeth Moore representing the Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Psychiatrists (RANZCP), and Trent Tolra as the new Branch Manager, Agency Policy Branch, Advice Research and Evaluation Division, NDIA.

Key highlights and issues discussed:

Data presentation by Office of Scheme Actuary (OSA)

Fiona Walsh (OSA) provided a report on Scheme data for psychosocial disability to 30 June 2020. Key points:

- 41,277 participants with primary psychosocial disability and 5,677 new participants with psychosocial disability
- Committed annual expenditure of $2.16 billion for psychosocial disability in 2019-2020, a $1.03 billion increase on 2018-2019.
- Average plan value for people with psychosocial disability (excluding Supported Independent Living (SIL)) is $60,063.

Briefings on Government's Response to Tune Review

Tune Review and Psychosocial Disability

Sarah Hawke, Department of Social Services (DSS) provided a briefing on the Government's response to the Tune Review on Friday 28 August 2020. The Government supports, or supports in principle, all 29 recommendations and supports.

The link to the Government Response to Tune Review can be found on the DSS website at - Government response to the NDIS act review

What does this mean for people with psychosocial disability?

- Recommendation 8 includes providing clearer guidance in considering whether a psychosocial impairment is permanent, recognising that some conditions are episodic or fluctuating. And removing reference to 'psychiatric conditions' when determining eligibility and replacing with 'psychosocial disability'.

- Recommendation 10 – is about the NDIA developing a comprehensive outreach strategy for engaging with people with disability who are unaware of, or are reluctant to seek support from the NDIS, with a dedicated focus on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, culturally and linguistically diverse communities and people with psychosocial disability.

Next steps

- The Government is now looking at a timeframe for draft legislation with the intention being to introduce the legislation in 2021.

The Minister has noted the engagement and consultation will be comprehensive, conducted in urban, regional, rural and remote areas by every method possible during the COVID-19 restrictions. The department and the NDIA are working to develop a framework for consultation and engagement with the NDIA leading engagement on the introduction of independent assessments.

Changes to improve NDIS for people with psychosocial disability

Sam Bennett, General Manager, Advice, Research and Evaluation Division briefed the meeting on three significant proposed changes to the Scheme that Minister Robert announced on August 28.

- The NDIA has been looking at how to improve the consistency, reliability and equity of access and planning decisions in response to the Tune Review and looking ahead to post-transition Scheme design requirements.
- Three important and interlinked changes:
  - Independent Assessments (IA): to improve consistency and fairness in NDIA decision making for access and planning
  - Personalised budgets: changes to planning so that reasonable and necessary plan budgets for all participants are more closely informed by IA information
  - Plan flexibility: simplified plans that enable participant choice and control
- The introduction of IAs funded by NDIA and based on a person's functional capacity, including environmental factors and strengths (not diagnosis) will mean fairer, more objective decisions.
- The improved quality and consistency of information about participants and their needs, will be used to shift the emphasis of planning from line by line negotiation of supports to helping participants set and achieve their goals within a (largely) flexible budget.

- The NDIA will consult and engage with states and territories, and other key stakeholders across the sector, over coming months to ensure we get these changes right for participants and the Scheme.

Reports from members

Members' reports highlighted the extraordinary efforts that participants, families and carers and service providers have made in responding to the pandemic, protecting themselves and providing supports in different ways including video connections. The meeting discussed some of the impacts of the changes that have had to occur and the need to understand what the new normal might look like.
