Sensory-based interventions

This is a brief overview of information about sensory-based interventions, taken from the Autism CRC report, Interventions for children on the autism spectrum: A synthesis of research evidence (Autism Interventions Evidence Report). There are seven other category overviews available designed to help people learn about different interventions and their research evidence. To understand the information in its full context, we encourage you to access the full report. Why are sensory-based interventions supposed to support children's development? Sensory-based interventions are based on the theoretical premise that sensory functions are a fundamental building block of all developmental skills, and that differences in...

Brenden's Hall of fame career builds through right supports

For champion swimmer and NDIS participant Brenden Hall, living the life he wants while dominating in the pool comes from a foundation built on the right supports. Brenden, who is profoundly deaf and a right leg amputee due to complications from Chicken Pox over 2 decades ago, said the NDIS has helped him to maintain his success. Now 29 and competing at his third Commonwealth Games this week in Birmingham in the S9 100m backstroke, Brenden said he would never shy away from a challenge. He said says his love for being in the pool – and his support out...
